SUCCAH SHEHI GEVONAH CHAPTER ONE SUCCAH 17A'

Misfufah Having discussed above, that the law of a vertical gap between the e'chukh and the walls, the Mishnah now deals with a horizontal gap.

The Mishnah now enumerates three cases in which the e'chukh was separated from the wall, not by an empty gap, but by material (wood) for a sukka:

A In the case of a house whose roof was leached and the owner placed e'chukh over the roof. It is valid as a sukka. And in the case of a courtyard surrounded by porches over which e'chukh was placed. Similarly, in the case of a large sukka whose e'chukh is surrounded by a wall. If there is a space four amot wide beneath the (e'chukh) - the sukka is invalid.

B In the case of a house whose roof was leached and the owner placed e'chukh over the roof. It is valid as a sukka. And in the case of a courtyard surrounded by porches over which e'chukh was placed. Similarly, in the case of a large sukka whose e'chukh is surrounded by a wall. If there is a space four amot wide beneath the (e'chukh) - the sukka is invalid.

C Gemara The first three clauses of the Mishnah teach that a strip of invalid e'chukh less than four amot wide altogether will do so, but that the Mishnah, because we view it as an extension of the wall bending into the sukka. The Gemara asks why the Mishnah used three examples to illustrate this point.

D The Mishnah teaches that if the remainder of the roof remains four amot wide from the wall, the e'chukh is valid. This is due to the principle of shema k'chama (literally: heard wall, here: in a horizontal gap between the wall and the e'chukh). The book everyone is talking about ...

“ I've seen people for whom Margaret Thatcher showed respect, and I've seen people for whom Rav Yaakov Kamenetsky stood up. But I have known only one man for whom Rav Yaakov would express admiration, and toward whom heads of state would bow. ”

“ When you left his study, you didn't just have a generous check: you had dignity, respect, and a new sense of pride in what you were doing. ”

It's quite a story. It started in the beis medrash and ended there, but along the way, Reb Moshe Reichmann became one of the wealthiest men in the world, hailed as a brilliant and innovative developer — and one of the generation's greatest supporters of Torah. It's the story of a journey to spiritual greatness, to faith and humility and extraordinary generosity, a story that takes us through construction sites and boardrooms as well as the hallowed halls of yeshivas and batei medrash.

Yisroel Besser brings us a story that will leave us enthralled by its unexpected twists and turns. More: it will make us newly sensitive to the potential to give that lies within each one of us.

His dignity and generosity will lift you to greatness!
